The Elderly

Thinking about others is key. When you think of others, others think of you. Helping people is great, but helping those in need of help is phenomenal!

Helping elderly is the right thing to do. If you help the elderly you are doing something. You may make a difference to the world and to yourself. To help the elderly, you can help them cross the street or help them in their homes. You never know what an elderly person has been through. Some had to live through World War II, others through the Great Depression, and some even through segregation. You need to help even if they didn't go through dark times. You never know if this person has been in the hospital or is suffering from sickness. You always need to help them from volunteering at retirement homes to just helping on the street. Someone always needs help somewhere in the world. Out there in the world, there is not one person that doesn't need help. Everyone needs help from emotional help to physical help – just always help! There is someone that will need it.

When you think of others, they will remember you. They won't forget you. Thinking of others is the key, and when you have the key, you will unlock the door to happiness.
